ABSTRACT

This directory offers an inventory of educational opportunities available to beginning entrepreneurs and small business owners in New York. Drawing from a fall 1986 survey of secondary and postsecondary educational institutions in the state, the directory presents data provided by 112 institutions concerning more than 140 programs on content emphasis, objectives, target audience, format, schedule, cost, available assistance, and instructional staff. Where appropriate, lists and descriptions of seminars and workshops offered as part of individual programs are provided. In addition to a descriptive paragraph on each program, the directory also lists a contact person, phone number, institution, and address. A listing of small business development centers, economic development centers, and other agencies that offer entrepreneurial training, such as chambers of commerce, cooperative extension centers, and small business administration offices, is also given for each region. ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This directory of educational opportunities for entrepreneurs and small business owners is an activity of a project undertaken by the Two-Year College Development Center, University at Albany, State University of New York, and supported by the Office of Occupational and Continuing Education, New York State Education Department. The project is assisting the New York State Entrepreneurship Education Task Force and the New York State Interagency Small Business Task Force, Subcommittee on Education and Training in providing a resource that will increase awareness of available training opportunities across the State. We also wish to acknowledge the guidance provided by staff of the Bureau of Economic Development Coordination and the Bureau of Grants Administration.

This directory was made possible through the willingness of administrators, faculty and staff at more than 200 secondary and postsecondary institutions and agencies to share information about their programs, courses and activities geared to meeting needs of new and experienced small business owners. It documents the range and scope of educational opportunities available to entrepreneurs and small business owners in New York State. As with any directory of this kind, entries will change with time. Blank Update Forms are included in the final section for use by providers in updating this resource.

INTRODUCTION

The overall intent of this project is to develop an inventory of educational opportunities available to beginning entrepreneurs/small business owners and to assist in dissemination of the information. This document is a directory of opportunities that were identified in a statewide survey (Fall 1986) of secondary and postsecondary educational institutions in New York State. In addition, surveys were distributed to Small Business Centers, Regional Economic Development Centers and other agencies that were referred by responders.

No directory of this sort is ever totally inclusive. There are programs currently available which do not appear because the institutions did not participate in the survey. Too, there are new programs which have been initiated since the surveys were returned and the information compiled. Degree programs in business and their components have not been included since they are widely available at many colleges. There is no doubt that regular degree program courses have applicability to small business owners/entrepreneurs, but the purpose of this directory is to identify the educational offerings tailored to the special needs of the entrepreneur.

The directory does provide the foundation for a computerized database that has the potential to serve as a statewide reference tool for both agencies and individuals interested in educational opportunities for entrepreneurship. Plans exist to update and expand this information as warranted by identification of new or additional opportunities. Therefore, if your program for small business/entrepreneurs does not appear in this edition of the directory, we ask for your help in updating by sharing information about your educational opportunities as they occur. For the convenience of the reader, blank entry sheets for updating are provided at the back of the directory.

The directory is comprised of data from 112 institutions. One hundred four (104) other institutions reported that they currently offered no programs of this type.

The programs and educational opportunities are categorized by the 10 Economic Development Regions. Each entry is identified by title and profiled by content emphasis, objectives, target audience, format, schedule, cost, available assistance, instructional staff and a descriptive paragraph(s). For each, the contact person, phone number, institution and address are provided to facilitate linkages and exchange.

Each set of regional entries is preceded by a page that identifies the counties in the region. Small Business Development Centers and Economic Development Centers are also listed with addresses, telephone and a contact person(s). In response to the request for identification of agencies other than educational institutions that offer entrepreneurship training, Chambers of Commerce, Cooperative Extension Centers and Small Business Administration Offices were noted most frequently in all regions of the state. Less frequently, local libraries and local business organizations and associations were identified. A listing of agencies identified in the geographical area is given prior to each regional group of program opportunities.

The survey respondents also provided information about articulation of programs and marketing strategies.

Articulated activities. Forty-nine (49) educational institutions reported linkages with other agencies in providing small business training. The most frequent cooperative relationships were with the Regional Education Centers for Economic Development, Small Business Administration, Chambers of Commerce, Private Industry Councils, New York State Department of Commerce, SCORE/ACE and other selected educational institutions in the respective regions. The purposes of these cooperative efforts were most frequently stated as sharing resources for the presentation of workshops/seminars and institutes, sharing mailing lists, promotion and recruitment information, fund-seeking, counseling/consulting, and general program support of assistance.

Marketing/recruitment strategies. The techniques reported as being used in marketing and recruitment most frequently were mailings, media and newspaper announcements, bulletins, brochures and direct contact with other agencies involved with small business. When targeting programs for minorities, many of the same strategies are employed with special attention given to personal contact and cooperation with appropriate community groups. The approaches are similar when targeting women as clientele. These include promotion through presentations at appropriate professional clubs, auxiliaries, radio/TV shows and through cooperative actions with key individuals in the business community.

Business and Technical Writing Skills

Learn to write memos, letters and other important forms of business communication. To use best vocabulary, eliminate jargon, create perfect tone professionally. Clarity, nouns, verbs, organization.

Accounting Overview for Non-Accountants

An overall introduction to accounting and finance. Systematic and comprehensive approach to financial analysis. Students will become familiar with learning balance sheet analysis, nature of assets, liabilities, equity, cash flow, cost accounting fundamentals, and understanding auditor's reports. Become familiar with the terminology of accounting and finance, and general accounting principles. Financial reporting process and effective communication with accountants and auditors will be stressed.

Computer Skill Training

Certificate of Information Processing courses designed for those with no prior experience or those who have basic knowledge and wish to apply more advanced methods to solve business problems. Applicable to retailing, marketing, finance, accounting, etc.

Supervisory Skills

Good for new and prospective managers, practical review for those who have been on projects. Role of manager, how to motivate employees, sources and styles of leadership, planning, organizing, managing time, delegating responsibilities and learning what can and what cannot be delegated. Recognize where the real power is. Learn how to appraise performance and how to project the self-confidence which is needed to be a manager.

Customer Service

Companies who wish to increase sales potential need to sharpen communication skills of all levels of employees. Special emphasis is placed on training managers to train assistant-managers, first line supervisors and new employees.

Stress Management

When tired, yet there is much to be done, utilize a technique based on self-hypnosis. Over the years, the instructor used this technique as a college student to deal with heavy study loads and in business especially during breaks at meetings and conferences. This course will be particularly helpful to business people, college students and others who have demanding schedules.

Computer Training for People in Small Business

Participants are shown three basic types of business software applications: word processing, the electronic spreadsheet, and database management systems.

Managing Your Time Wisely

Since time is one of our most critical resources, learning to use it wisely promotes relaxation, reduces stress and contributes to a sense of accomplishment. Successful business people know that managing time wisely leads to an efficiently run organization. This workshop offers suggestions on delegation of time, strategies and creation of a desirable workplace.

Supervision in the Small Business Organization

This workshop offers participants an opportunity to examine their supervisory styles. Participants address human relations, dilemmas, problem identification and resolution, and an analysis of individual and group leadership styles.
